

Order Handling Practices for Exchange-Listed Options in the U.S.

While the firm is holding your options order, the firm or its clients may engage in trading activity in the same or related products, including options and underlying securities. While such trading activity is unrelated to your order, it may coincidentally impact the market prices of options that you are buying or selling.